

EFFECTIVENESS OF IMPLEMENTATION OF PREVENTIVE ACTIVITY AS A GUARANTEE OF SUSTAINABILITY OF LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES DURING THE LEGAL REGIME OF MARTIAL LAW

Daria Serhiivna YEVTUSHENKO,

*PhD, Lecturer in the Department of Constitutional and Administrative Law,
Zaporizhzhia National University, Zaporizhzhia, Ukraine
<https://orcid.org/0000-0001-5334-8498>
darya_ezh@ukr.net*

Preventive activity of law enforcement agencies is of great importance in the formation of state stability to any manifestations of crime, to the commission by persons of unlawful actions, including those that infringe on public order, public safety, life, health, legitimate interests of a person. Certain activity is such that is able to prevent illegal actions, to prevent the commission of such and ensure compliance with the current legislation, formation and improvement of society legal culture, ensuring zero tolerance of the population to the commission of illegal actions, influence on the consciousness in order to ensure that the population understands the negative, dangerous results of committing the latter. Preventive activity during the legal regime of martial law not only does not lose its importance in comparison with normal conditions of state existence, but, on the contrary, attracts attention that in special, difficult conditions the effective implementation of such activity is a guarantee of public confidence in law enforcement agencies as "guarantor" of calm and assistance in difficult life situations, including those associated with the challenges of the time.

Keywords: preventive activity, law enforcement agencies, effectiveness, sustainability, the legal regime of martial law

Preventive activity of law enforcement agencies is of great importance in the formation of state stability to any manifestations of crime, to the commission by persons of unlawful actions, including those that infringe on public order, public safety, life, health, legitimate interests of a person. Certain activity is such that is able to prevent illegal actions, to prevent the commission of such and ensure compliance with the current legislation, formation and improvement of society legal culture, ensuring zero tolerance of the population to the commission of illegal actions, influence on the consciousness in order to ensure that the population understands the negative, dangerous results of committing the latter. Preventive activity during the legal regime of martial law not only does not lose its importance in comparison with normal conditions of state existence, but, on the contrary, attracts attention that in special, difficult conditions the effective implementation of such activity is a guarantee of public confidence in law enforcement agencies as "guarantor" of calm and assistance in difficult life situations, including those associated with the challenges of the time.

That is why we should consider the preventive activities of law enforcement agencies as an indicator of the stability of the latter under the legal regime of martial law, and the effectiveness of such implementation as a guarantee of such stability.

Preventive activities of law enforcement agencies have their own special features that distinguish such activities from other types of activities, among which are: a) legality; b) purposefulness; c) focus on preventing the commission of offenses, both by persons who have not committed such offenses at the time of implementation of preventive activities by law enforcement officials or their units, and by persons who have already committed such offenses in order to prevent their recurrence; d) implementation with the aim of maintaining law and order and forming legal awareness of persons in the spirit of its observance; e) identification and elimination of factors influencing the commission of offenses; f) analysis of such factors with the calculation of the percentage of probability of committing certain types of offenses under certain conditions and the impact of "external" and "internal" factors on the offender, etc.

The effectiveness of such activities by law enforcement agencies during the period of martial law has become of great importance, since preventive activities are inherently preventive, i.e., if they are effective, they reduce the percentage of offenses, which reduces the "burden" factor in the real conditions of the state's existence, conditions that already pose new challenges to the state and society and the need to respond promptly to such challenges. At the same time, all components of the preventive activities of law enforcement agencies are equally important in order to achieve a holistic system of preventing the commission of offenses, ensuring human rights, law and order, public peace, forming, ensuring and maintaining public trust in law enforcement agencies, maintaining the image of law enforcement agencies and ensuring public cooperation with the latter.

The effectiveness of such activities depends on minimizing the risks associated with the commission of any type of offense, reducing the percentage of offenses, building trust in the minds of the population, confidence in the objectivity, legality, and "correctness" of the actions of individual employees in particular and law enforcement agencies in general. At the same time, it is necessary to take into account the special conditions of the state's existence at present, because the existence of such conditions increases the responsibility of law enforcement officers to society for the efficiency, effectiveness, legality of the activities they carry out, the importance of the Oath that these entities take when entering service and the strengthening of the relationship between such entities and the state, and the activities aimed at achieving the goals set for the state, therefore, the effectiveness of preventive activities, as well as other types of activities aimed at improving the conditions of the state, its development and prosperity, is extremely important, and undoubtedly such activities can be defined as one of the keys to the sustainability of law enforcement agencies in the special conditions of the state.